

The Teligent Expectations

At Teligent, quality is the most important product that we produce. Quality drives our reputation, our sales, and most importantly, our culture. Quality comes from within and is made up of expectations.

These expectations of ourselves and our co-workers include accountability, honesty, team work, a good work ethic, and intellectual curiosity.

The foundation of our culture is the knowledge that quality comes first over all else. We strive to be experts in current Good Manufacturing Practices (cGMP) and we hold each other to high standards. We know that those standards include an orderly environment that is both clean and safe.

To exceed these standards, we are each empowered to ask tough questions and proactively test assumptions to drive continuous improvement in all our processes. We possess the courage to say, "No" when it is right.

We expect each other to plan appropriately for our work, to be responsible for our actions, to keep our promises, and to anticipate problems ahead of time. We demonstrate our commitment to each other by working together to establish goals and objectives which are measurable and attainable.

We commit to uphold these expectations to foster an entrepreneurial environment of continuous improvement dedicated to quality.